MODERATE DRY AND WET SIDE TAKE ACTION

Plank Promising Stern Enforcement Prepared To Quell Any Uprising.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—A plank promising stern enforcement of prohibition by name has been worked out by moderate dries and wets to quell any threatened uprising in the Democratic national convention which convenes at noon today for the increasing purpose of nominating Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York for the presidency.

The compromise was worked out with the Smith people by the senatorial group including Senator Pittman of Nevada, prospective chairman of the resolutions committee; Senator Caraway of Arkansas; Senator Harrison of Mississippi and others.

Its conclusion soared the vice presidential stock of Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, who with Evans Woolen of Indiana, has been most prominently mentioned as prospective running mate for Smith.

The compromise plank will deplore the failure of the Republican administration to enforce all laws. It will promise vigorous enforcement of every law by Democrats and will mention prohibition specifically. It does not mention either the 18th amendment or the Volstead Act by name, the United Press is informed.

The extreme dries were not consulted about the arrangement and decided in a midnight conference to continue their fight for the strongest prohibition plank ever written by a national party. This conference was held in the office of Jesse Jones, Houston millionaire host of the convention, and was attended by Joseph Daniels, former secretary of the navy, Houston Thompson, former member of the Federal Trade commission; Gov. Dan Moody of Texas, the boy Bryan, who has undertaken leadership of the dry cause; Daniel Roper, former McAdoo supporter and George Fort Milton, publicity man for the McAdoo forces in 1924.

The conferees decided to present their extreme dry planks to the platform committee despite the agreement of the moderates with the Smith people. They want to name the 18th amendment and the Volstead act. They also decided to contest the Smith nomination to the last ballot.

Their decision, however, means nothing more than that they are going through with their fight for the present anyway. If they even go through to the convention floor with their contest, they will face an alliance of the moderate dries and Smith forces which will control about four-fifths of the voting power of the convention. They can not hope to prevail in the face of such overwhelming numbers.

The "majority plank" is understood to have originated with Senator Caraway of Arkansas. He is an ardent dry as is his colleague, Senator Robinson. But they, as well as the other members of their group, believe prohibition is not and should not be the dominant issue. They do not see why the party should disregard political wisdom for the satisfaction of what is apparently a small minority of the convention.

Pittman took the proposed compromise to George R. Van Namee, campaign manager here for Smith and after some consultations among the Smith leaders it was pronounced acceptable and the word went forth that for the first time since 1914 delegates to a Democratic national convention were to assemble in a spirit of almost complete harmony.

Five prohibition planks are to be submitted to the platform committee when it meets later in the day to begin its work, one from Moody, one from Daniels, one from the United dry organizations.

SEAPLANES TO LAUNCH LAST ARCTIC HUNT

If Seven Men of Italia's Crew Cannot Be Found Search Will End.

VIRGO BAY, Spitzbergen, June 26.—Two giant seaplanes were waiting today for fog to lift so they could start a last—and despairing—search eastward over the Arctic ice for the seven men carried away May 25 with the wrecked gasbag of the Polar dirigible Italia.

If nothing is seen of them, as is expected, the seven men will be listed here as presumed to have been lost.

There was greatest pessimism over the chance of finding these men and the party of three, headed by Prof. Finn Malmgren, Swedish meteorologist, that started out to walk across the ice to land.

Gen. Umberto Nobile, the Italia's commander, under treatment in his cabin aboard the supply ship Citta Di Milano here after his rescue from the ice, is frankly hopeless that either the gas-bag or Malmgren party will be found.

Commandant Umberto Maddalena in his seaplane Savoia S-55 and Swedish Lieut. Nilsson, in the three-motored Folker seaplane Upland were nominated today to make a last search for the party of seven carried away with the Italia.

They will fly as far eastward as they can, keeping one mile apart while their crews in the big planes keep a lookout over the barren ice wastes for sign of life.

Nothing has been heard of the Malmgren party that set out four weeks ago to try to walk to North Cape to take rescuers to the Nobile camp east of Foy's Island.

TROMSOE, Norway, June 26.—Arctic experts here believed today the French Farman seaplane carrying Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the south pole, to the rescue of the crew of the dirigible Italia, would be found somewhere west of Bear Island—if at all.

The Norwegian fisheries steamship Michael Sars returned to Bear Island late last night after a thorough search of the southern margin of the polar icefields as far as 200 miles east of Bear Island.

No trace was seen of the plane or its six men missing for eight days.

HOBBOE'S CONVENTION LANDED IN PRISON

TROY, N. Y., June 25. Nine hoppers held a convention in a box car and waxed so boisterous in their enthusiasm over the head of their ticket as to disturb the neighborhood for a block around.

A policeman was summoned, and sneaking up to the convention hall, snapped the box car door shut and locked it. Then he summoned reserves and a few patrol wagons.

Each delegate was given thirty days in jail.

Where Democratic Convention Is Being Held

Here are exterior and interior views of the huge Convention Hall erected in Houston, Texas, especially for the Democratic assemblage at which a Presidential candidate will be selected. As may be seen, the structure has been prettily decorated for the event, and has a seating capacity of 25,000.

Coolidge Tries To Paddle Own Canoe; But Attempt Fails

CEDAR ISLAND LODGE WIS., June 26.—President Coolidge, who is about to relinquish his task of guiding the ship of state, is learning to paddle a canoe.

After a fishing trip yesterday on the Brule river, the president tried to steer his canoe as it approached the landing docks in front of his summer home. Eye-witnesses said the president had poor luck, succeeding only in paddling the craft around in circles.

John La Roque, Mr. Coolidge's Chippewa Indian guide, easily brought the canoe to a safe landing.

BROTHER-IN-LAW KILLED BY TRAIN AT HAYDEVILLE

Dr. H. C. Allen Receives Word of Tragic Death of His Kin.

Homer Stiers, a brother-in-law of Dr. H. C. Allen of this city, was instantly killed by a Hocking Valley railroad train, three quarters of a mile east of Haydenville Monday afternoon.

The accident occurred while Mr. Stiers was on his way home, and it is thought that his car stalled on the track.

The victim was a trucker and peach grower on a large scale. Several years ago his output of fruit was purchased by The Winthrop Canning Co. of this city. Three years ago he sold 15,000 bushels of peaches from his orchards.

His wife, three sons and three daughters survive. They are: Dr. Fred Stiers, Manning Stiers, of Chicago, Ill.; Joseph Stiers, a student of the Cincinnati Medical college; Mrs. Louise Love and Miss Margaret Stiers of Colorado; and Nellie, wife of Trevor Halliday, of Cleveland, president of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio.

Another son, Wilfred Stiers, was killed in the World war.

ROBERT MANTELL IS NEARING DEATH

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J., June 25. Little hope for recovery of Robert R. Mantell, veteran actor, was held today by his physician, Dr. John Boyd.

Boyd said Mantell was weaker than he was yesterday. The actor is at his country home "Brucwood" suffering from a general breakdown.

YOU CAN SIGN UP NOW TO AID STREET LIGHTS

Herald Has Chamber of Commerce Petition at Office For That Purpose.

Property owners interested in seeing that Circleville's downtown streets are properly lighted now have their opportunity.

The petition for that purpose, prepared by the Chamber of Commerce, is now at the office of The Circleville Herald and those interested can sign at the newspaper building.

The total cost of the improvement will be but slightly over $10,000, installed, ready to light. This cost is based on the installation of 70 boulevard lights on Main and Court-sts. The improvement would be upon and for that section of Court-st. between the north side of Mount-st. and the south side of High-st., and upon and for that section of Main-st. between the west side of Washington-st. and the east side of Western-ave.

The cost of $10,000 would be apportioned over a period of 10 years, so that the total cost would be but $1,000 a year, distributed in proportion to the various property owners.

Now is your chance to show whether you believe in a great civic improvement for Circleville—an improvement that incidentally also increases the valuation of your property.

Come in and sign on!

MINORITY STOCKHOLDERS TAKE ACTION AGAINST DODGE CO. IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, June 26.—The $250,000,000 merger of Dodge Brothers, Inc., and the Chrysler corporation, which was to have become effective today, has been halted temporarily at least, by a minority stockholder's injunction.

Supreme Court Justice Richard D. Lyden late yesterday granted a temporary injunction staying the merger pending a hearing in Supreme Court today before Justice George V. Mullan.

The action was brought in the name of Col. Calvin Hocker Goddard of Richmond, Va., and is directed against Dillon, Read and company, bankers who acquired control of the Dodge company in 1925, and hold all of its voting stock. Col. Goddard is said to represent about 2,000 shares of preferred stock out of a total of 50,000 shares outstanding.

House, Holtzhausen and McElroy, counsel for Col. Goddard, in a statement said the action was based on the contention of Dillon, Read and company that the Dodge assets can be transferred "without regard to the right of the preference stockholders to receive $100 a share for their stock on a dissolution of the company or the liquidation of its assets."

100 NEW LIFES SING SING PRISON, N. Y.

One hundred and nine criminals have received life sentences in this state in the last two years under the Baumes laws which prescribe life terms for any person convicted of four or more felonies.

Former Grocer In Mortgage Case Is To Face Charges

E. C. Bowman formerly a grocer of E. Main-st, this city, was one of the directors of the defunct Cities Mortgage company and one of the 10 directors indicted by the Grand Jury last Friday.

Mr. Bowman gave bond Monday afternoon in the sum of $10,000. His bond was signed by his wife, Lela M. Bowman, James and Ada M. Huber. Former Secretary of State, Harvey C. Smith was president of the company and furnished bond in the sum of $25,000.

It is thought that the indicted directors will plead not guilty to the charge of embezzlement, as the charge is technical and it is doubtful if Mr. Bowman will be found guilty.

A number of citizens of this county, it is understood, had invested their savings in the company.

Minority Stockholders Take Action Against Dodge Co. In New York.

TRIO OF WOMEN GIVEN FINES IN STEALING CASE

Two Assessed $25; Pay Way Out; Third Given $100 and Costs, 10 Days.

TRIO OF WOMEN GIVEN FINES IN STEALING CASE

Two Assessed $25; Pay Way Out; Third Given $100 and Costs, 10 Days.

The three women arrested Saturday night on the charge of shoplifting, had a hearing before Mayor Hedges Tuesday morning.

The trio pleaded guilty to the charge of petty larceny. Teresa Woodgeard on whom was found a table cloth and a bathing suit, was given a fine of $100 and costs and 10 days in jail. The costs were suspended Her Attorney R. S. Cunningham, of Lancaster made a plea for leniency before sentence was passed, saying that the prisoner was the mother of four small children, and no one at home to care for them.

Her husband is in the county jail here charged with being an accomplice, and also with receiving stolen property.

The children, the attorney said, are now in charge of a young girl cousin, only 14 years of age. Her mother is not able to care for the children, and he asked that the court suspend jail sentence, so she would be able probably to raise enough money to pay her fine. He thought that possibly she could secure the money in Lancaster from The Security Loan Co., by mortgaging her chattel property, which she would be compelled to do, in order to get back to her home and children.

Mary Elizabeth Reynolds, and May Smith Woodgeard, her accomplices charged also with petty larceny, were given fines of $25, and costs each. The costs were suspended.

Both paid their fines and were released. Mrs. Teresa Woodgeard was remanded to the sheriff, and the matter of her jail sentence was taken under consideration by the mayor.

Chairman Robinson Urges "No Wet Plank" In Spite of Smith's Stand.

BULLETIN)
CONVENTION HALL, HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—The Democratic convention adjourned at 1:43 p. m., today, to assemble tonight again at 7:30 p. m.

By CARL D. GROAT

United Press Staff Correspondent
CONVENTION HALL, HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—Thousands, baked by the unrelenting Houston heat, invaded convention hall today for the opening of the Democratic national convention.

In sweltering droves they came starting with the early forenoon. Long before noon, the huge coliseum, built as a monument to Texas enterprise, was filling.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—Ohio started something when it expressed opinion that it could switch to Al Smith toward the tail end of the first ballot if the New York governor appeared to be within calling distance of the nomination at that time. Since this Ohio attitude became known other state delegations, including Indiana, have indicated similar attitudes.

Under the program effected in the Ohio delegation Claude Meeker of Columbus as chairman of the Buckeye delegation would make the switch, probably of 46 of Ohio's 48 votes, to Smith from Pomerene after Henry G. Brunner of Mansfield, chairman of the state executive committee, formally released the delegation from further support of Pomerene.

Such a switch is regarded as the start of a first ballot nominee for Smith as it would give the New York governor in the neighborhood of 700 votes. He would need only 33 1-2 and with Indiana following Ohio's lead and West Virginia adding another twelve he would go over quick and in sharp contrast to the battle of ballots that took place in Smith's home town four years ago.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—Senator Robinson of Arkansas, permanent chairman of the Democratic national convention, is making his initial address today, suggested that "no wet plank be inserted in our platform."

"It is true," he said, "that the Democratic party is not a prohibition party. Neither is it an anti-prohibition party—the fear that this convention will attempt to commit the party to a 'wet' platform has alarmed many southern Democrats who favor the continuance of prohibition because of the evidence of its economic and moral value in the progress of the south. To ignore the practical political aspect of this question is to invite and encourage division in our ranks and to submerge these fundamental issues for which we can unite in concert."

He declared that as congress now is constituted and as it likely will be composed for many years to come, there "appears no likelihood of repeal or nullification of the 18th amendment."

He pleaded for harmony and (Continued On Page Two)

Property owners interested in seeing that Circleville's downtown streets are properly lighted now have their opportunity.

The petition for that purpose, prepared by the Chamber of Commerce, is now at the office of The Circleville Herald and those interested can sign at the newspaper building.

The total cost of the improvement will be but slightly over $10,000, installed, ready to light. This cost is based on the installation of 70 boulevard lights on Main and Court-sts. The improvement would be upon and for that section of Court-st. between the north side of Mound-st. and the south side of High-st., and upon and for that section of Main-st. between the west side of Washington-st. and the east side of Western-ave.

The cost of $10,000 would be apportioned over a period of 10 years, so that the total cost would be but $1,000 a year, distributed in proportion to the various property owners.

Now is your chance to show whether you believe in a great civic improvement for Circleville—an improvement that incidentally also increases the valuation of your property.

Come in and sign up!

CHRYSLER-DODGE MERGER HALTED BY INJUNCTION

Minority Stockholders Take Action Against Dodge Co. in New York.

NEW YORK, June 26.—The $250,000,000 merger of Dodge Brothers, Inc., and the Chrysler corporation, which was to have become effective today, has been halted temporarily at least, by a minority stockholder's injunction.

Supreme Court Justice Richard P. Lydon late yesterday granted a temporary injunction staying the merger pending a hearing in Supreme Court today before Justice George V. Mullan.

The action was brought in the name of Col. Calvin Hocker Goddard of Richmond, Va., and is directed against Dillon, Read and company, bankers who acquired control of the Dodge company in 1925, and hold all of its voting stock. Col. Goddard is said to represent about 5,000 shares of preferred stock out of a total of 850,000 shares outstanding.

Former Grocer In Mortgage Case Is To Face Charges

E. C. Bowman formerly a grocer of E. Main-st, this city, was one of the directors of the defunct Cities Mortgage company and one of the 10 directors indicted by the Grand Jury last Friday.

Mr. Bowman gave bond Monday afternoon in the sum of $10,000. His bond was signed by his wife, Lela M. Bowman, James and Ada M. Huber. Former Secretary of State, Harvey C. Smith was president of the company and furnished bond in the sum of $25,000.

It is thought that the indicted directors will plead not guilty to the charge of embezzlement, as the charge is technical and it is doubtful if Mr. Bowman will be found guilty.

A number of citizens of this county, it is understood, had invested their savings in the company.

TRIO OF WOMEN GIVEN FINES IN STEALING CASE

Two Assessed $25; Pay Way Out; Third Given $100 and Costs, 10 Days.

The three women arrested Saturday night on the charge of shoplifting, had a hearing before Mayor Hedges Tuesday morning.

The trio pleaded guilty to the charge of petty larceny.

Teresa Woodgeard on whom was found a table cloth and a bathing suit, was given a fine of $100 and costs and 10 days in jail. The costs were suspended Her Attorney R. S. Cunningham, of Lancaster made a plea for leniency before sentence was passed, saying that the prisoner was the mother of four small children, and no one at home to care for them.

Her husband is in the county jail here charged with being an accomplice, and also with receiving stolen property.

The children, the attorney said, are now in charge of a young girl cousin, only 14 years of age. Her mother is not able to care for the children, and he asked that the court suspend jail sentence, so she would be able probably to raise enough money to pay her fine. He thought that possibly she could secure the money in Lancaster from The Security Loan Co., by mortgaging her chattel property, which she would be compelled to do, in order to get back to her home and children.

Mary Elizabeth Reynolds, and May Smith Woodgeard, her accomplices charged also with petty larceny, were given fines of $25, and costs each. The costs were suspended.

Both paid their fines and were released. Mrs. Teresa Woodgeard was remanded to the sheriff, and the matter of her jail sentence was taken under consideration by the mayor.

FIVE KILLED IN FIREWORKS BLAST

THOMPSONVILLE Conn., June 26.—An explosion of fire works in the main building of the building of the New England Fireworks Co. at North Thompsonville took five lives today.

Wreckage was hurled into the air and fire immediately broke out. The roar of the blast could be heard for miles.

The action was brought in the name of Col. Calvin Hocker Goddard of Richmond, Va., and is directed against Dillon, Read and company, bankers who acquired control of the Dodge company in 1925, and hold all of its voting stock. Col. Goddard is said to represent about 5,000 shares of preferred stock out of a total of 850,000 shares outstanding.

House, Holthausen and McCloskey, counsel for Col. Goddard, in a statement said the action was based on the contention of Dillon, Read and company that the Dodge assets can be transferred "without regard to the right of the preference stockholders to receive $105 a share for their stock on a dissolution of the company or the liquidation of its assets."

Chairman Robinson Urges "No Wet Plank" In Spite of Smith's Stand.

(BULLETIN)
CONVENTION HALL, HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—Thousands, bated by the unrelenting Houston heat, invaded convention hall today for the opening of the Democratic national convention.

In sweltering droves they came, starting with the early forenoon. Long before noon, the huge coliseum, built as a monument to Texas enterprise, was filling.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—Ohio started something when it expressed opinion that it could switch to Al Smith toward the tail end of the first ballot if the New York governor appeared to be within calling distance of the nomination at that time. Since this Ohio attitude became known other state delegations including Indiana have indicated similar attitudes.

Under the program effected in the Ohio delegation Claude Meeker of Columbus as chairman of the Buckeye delegation would make the switch, probably of 46 of Ohio's 48 votes, to Smith from Pomerene under Henry G. Brunner of Mansfield, chairman of the state executive committee, formally released the delegation from further support of Pomerene.

Such a switch is regarded as the start of a first ballot nominate for Smith as it would give the New York governor in the neighborhood of 700 votes. He would need only 33 1-2 and with Indiana following Ohio's lead and West Virginia adding another twelve he would go over quick and in sharp contrast to the battle of ballots that took place in Smith's home town four years ago.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—Senator Robinson of Arkansas permanent chairman of the Democratic national convention, in making his initial address today, suggested that "no wet plank be inserted in our platform."

"It is true," he said, "that the Democratic party is not a prohibition party. Neither is it an anti-prohibition party—the fear that this convention will attempt to commit the party to a 'wet' platform has alarmed many southern Democrats who favor the continuance of prohibition because of the evidence of its economic and moral value in the progress of the south. To ignore the practical political aspect of this question is to invite and encourage division in our ranks and to submerge these fundamental issues for which we can unite in concert."

He declared that as congress now is constituted and as it likely will be composed for many years to come, there "appears no likelihood of repeal or nullification of the 18th amendment."

DEMOCRATS OF OHIO PLEDGED TO AL SMITH

Buckeyes Prepared To Contribute Their Share To His Nomination.

By LEO R. SACK
HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—Ohio Democrats Tuesday entered the Democratic national convention prepared to contribute their share towards the speedy nomination of Governor Smith of New York.

With all factional differences of four years ago forgotten Ohioans are prepared to have this convention show that despite prohibition and religious differences, the Democrats are ready to present the most united front since 1916 when Woodrow Wilson was a candidate to succeed himself.

The Buckeye leaders, former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, Henry Goeke of Lima, former State Chairman W. W. Durbin of Kenton, Claude Meeker of Columbus, and others are in accord with the spirit of Democratic spokesmen throughout the nation, all of whom are anxious to have the convention conclude its business with dispatch and good will. The Ohioans, altho they realize that Governor Smith can have the nomination on the first ballot, are prepared today to vote for former Senator Allee B. Pomerene as their first choice for president.

They realize, however, that Pomerene has no chance and are prepared to withdraw their support as soon as it becomes expedient to do so.

Pomerene, altho not in Houston, realizes this too and has left his cause in the hands of his friends, according to Mrs. Pomerene who is here as a spectator.

Mrs. Pomerene announced that she is not the bearer of a message, either verbally or in writing, from her husband, as was anticipated, similar to the letter of Governor Ritchie of Maryland withdrawing in favor of Governor Smith.

"Senator Pomerene will be guided entirely by the judgment of his friends and will not interfere with their judgment," she declared.

George S. White of Marietta, who is "second choice" of the Ohioans already has released the delegates from further obligation to him in order he may contribute his bit to the harmony program. The belief is that the Ohioans will switch on second or third ballot, if it does not become apparent that Smith will be nominated on the first ballot.

for "honorable compromises." He attacked what he called "false issues advanced by Republicans," including "sham prosperity"; he advocated honesty in government, and pleaded for a strong farm relief position and for a Democrat foreign policy.

The speech follows in part: The Democratic party has a mission which has not materially changed since the days of Jefferson. The necessity for political reform is greater now than ever before. Our party, from its birth, has safeguarded the rights of the masses. It has championed personal liberty and opposed centralization since its formation. The Democratic party has labored to establish the doctrine that the fundamental function of government is to secure equality of rights and opportunities for all citizens.

In this campaign the Republicans cunningly seek to raise false issues through which to win their way back into public favor. The national administration during the last seven years is indefensible from any standpoint. For corruption and inefficiency it is paralleled only by the disgraceful prostitution of power in states dominated by the Republican party. The assertion of our opponents that the Democratic party cannot be trusted to promote sound business is totally false. The Democratic party has at no time interfered with lawful enterprises. It is the defender of legitimate business.

The prosperity of the present by no means equals that under Democratic control. The facts on the whole do not justify the boast in the Kansas City platform. The Secretary of the Treasury admits in his annual report for 1927 that conditions during that year were worse than in 1926. The President's industrial conference board asserts that business prosperity in the United States is confined to giant corporations. The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce examined one hundred thousand concerns in 1927 and reported thirty-four thousand of them earning no profits whatever.

The commissioner of Internal Revenue states that only three-fifths of the corporations manufacturing textiles and the same percentage of corporations manufacturing failures reflects the falsity of the prosperity claim.

Many persons inspected the new plant of the Hosler Packing Company at the formal openings Monday afternoon and evening. Chas. Smith, owner of the plant, was the recipient of many bouquets from well-wishing friends.

here, one from Caraway and the compromise plank which probably will be offered by Pittman.

If the Die-Hards decide to, they can present a minority report to the convention. They are represented on the committee by Daniels and Moody.

Little disagreement is expected in the committee on the other planks. Several farm planks are to be submitted but leaders appear to be in general accord that the party should endorse the theory of systematic distribution of surplus crops and at the same time denounce direct government subsidies — the theory upon the McNary-Haugen farm bill was founded.

The committee will be named officially as soon as the temporary organization of the convention is completed this afternoon. It will begin public hearings about mid-afternoon, recessing for the night session, after which it will again take up its labors and probably work through until dawn.

The platform probably will be ready for presentation to the convention tomorrow. A tentative draft upon which Pittman and others have been working for will form the basis of the discussions.

facturing leather products reported net incomes for 1925. The record of commercial and of this claim of exceptional prosperity.

In 1919, only fifty state banks and four National banks failed with aggregate liabilities of less than $12,000,000; in 1925 three hundred and sixty-one state banks and one hundred and three national banks with total liabilities of $175,000,000 passed into receiverships. Note the figures for 1926: seven hundred and seventy-two state banks failed with liabilities of $266,000,000. The data for 1927 is incomplete but it shows total liabilities of state banks which became insolvent during that year in excess of $200,000,000.

What are the facts with respect to commercial failures? There were 20 per cent more in 1927 than in the previous year.

Annual farm products decreased more than $1,500,000,000 comparing 1924 with 1927.

The Bureau of Labor statistics reveal a 20 per cent decrease now in employment over 1927.

The depressed condition of agriculture is of common knowledge. This, the greatest of all industries, has been steadily declining since the Republican party initiated its policy of deflation in 1921. Every one knows that agriculture has been going backward since Wilson's administrations ended. Never before has there existed such discontent among farm producers. They attribute their distressed condition to the policies of the Republican party.

DEMOCRATS OF OHIO PLEDGED TO AL SMITH

Buckeyes Prepared To Contribute Their Share To His Nomination.

By LEO R. SACK
HOUSTON, Tex., June 26.—Ohio Democrats Tuesday entered the Democratic national convention prepared to contribute their share towards the speedy nomination of Governor Smith of New York.

With all factional differences of four years ago forgotten Ohioans are prepared to have this convention show that despite prohibition and religious differences, the Democrats are ready to present the most united front since 1916 when Woodrow Wilson was a candidate to succeed himself.

The Buckeye leaders, former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, Henry Goetz of Lima, former State Chairman W. W. Durbin of Kenton, Claude Meeker of Columbus, and others are in accord with the spirit of Democratic spokesmen throughout the nation, all of whom are anxious to have the convention conclude its business with dispatch and good will.

The Ohioans, also they realize that Governor Smith can have the nomination on the first ballot, are prepared today to vote for former Senator Atlee B. Pomerene as their first choice for president.

They realize, however, that Pomerene has no chance and are prepared to withdraw their support as soon as it becomes expedient to do so.

Pomerene, also not in Houston, realizes this too and has left his cause in the hands of his friends, according to Mrs. Pomerene who is here as a spectator.

George S. White of Marietta, who is "second choice" of the Ohioans already has released the delegates from further obligation to him in order he may contribute his bit to the harmony program.

The belief is that the Ohioans will switch on second or third ballot, if it does not become apparent that Smith will be nominated on the first ballot.

Newton D. Baker is sitting today as a member of resolutions committee before which the only real fight of the convention may develop. Baker will listen to the arguments for and against a bone dry prohibition plank in the platform. He would not, however, express his own individual views today.

Congressman Charles A. Moonney of Cleveland announced that he will go before the committee in order to recommend adoption of a plank pledging liberalization of immigration regulations.

"The great trouble with the immigration law today," Moonney said, "is the inhumane way in which it is being administered. There is entirely too much red-tape, most of which can be eliminated."

Delegates from other states have noticed that a number of prominent Ohio Democrats are not included among those present this year. Among the absentees are former James M. Cox, once his party's candidate for President, who was the Ohio favorite son four years ago at New York; Governor Donahey, who has gotten much honorary mention as a candidate for vice-president; Senator Cyrus Locher, who is seeking election as successor to the late Senator Frank B. Willis.

Congressman Martin L. Davey, who is regarded as the foremost candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor and Charles Morris of Canton, now editor of the Canton News.

The Bureau of Labor statistics reveal a 20 per cent decrease now in employment over 1927.

The depressed condition of agriculture is of common knowledge. This, the greatest of all industries, has been steadily declining since the Republican party initiated its policy of deflation in 1921. Every one knows that agriculture has been going backward since Wilson's administrations ended. Never before has there existed such discontent among farm producers. They attribute their distressed condition to the policies of the Republican party.

here, one from Caraway and the compromise plank which probably will be offered by Pittman.

If the Die-Hards decide to, they can present a minority report to the convention. They are represented on the committee by Daniels and Moody.

Little disagreement is expected in the committee on the other planks. Several farm planks are to be submitted but leaders appear to be in general accord that the party should endorse the theory of systematic distribution of surplus crops and at the same time denounce direct government subsidies—the theory upon the McNary-Haugen farm bill was founded.

The committee will be named officially as soon as the temporary organization of the convention is completed this afternoon. It will begin public hearings about mid-afternoon, recessing for the night session, after which it will again take up its labors and probably work through until dawn.

The platform probably will be ready for presentation to the convention tomorrow. A tentative draft upon which Pittman and others have been working for will form the basis of the discussions.

ALTHO SEASON IS JUST HALF COMPLETE NOW

Both Drawing Away From Field In Two Great League Races.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, June 26.—With almost half the season over, another world series between the New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals seems highly probable.
The Cardinals are fast drawing away from the field in the National League, going back home today after 26 games on the road with a five and a half game lead over the second place New York Giants.
The Philadelphia Athletics have failed time and again to take advantage of an opening presented them by the Yankees, and the conclusion is, almost reached that Connie Mack's club is not quite good enough to make the grade.
The Yankees, enjoying their second day's rest in a row today, are nine and a half games ahead of the Athletics, gaining a full game yesterday without so much as lifting a bat.
Fortune, favored the Athletics one day last week, and it seemed that the chance Connie Mack so long waited for was here. The Red Sox beat the Yankees twice Saturday while the Athletics defeated the Senators in two games, cutting the World champions' lead to seven and a half games.
The gate was open, the Yankees couldn't turn the Athletics back now. That was how the situation sized up on paper. Three days later we find the Yankees back in possession of their nine and a half game lead and the Athletics in the throes of a losing streak of three games.

Unless the Cardinals show a complete reversal of form, they are headed to another National League championship. The risk of the Cardinals to the peak of the National League is made more precarious by the fact that it was accomplished away from home.
The Cardinals left home May 28 in fifth place, four games from the top. They return home today and a half games in front after playing every other team in the league, winning 21 out of 27 games.
With a 21-day home stand in front of them, opening Thursday against the 1927 champions, the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Cardinals will have a chance to tighten their grip on first place.
At this time to overhaul the Cardinals. The New York Giants are playing no better than .500 per cent baseball against the second division clubs.
The Chicago Cubs are playing in and out baseball, and have ever showed any sustained drive since their sensational winning spurt of last month. The Cincinnati Reds are slipping into second division.
Of the other contenders, the Brooklyn Robins appear the most dangerous. The Robins are only seven games behind the Cardinals and are playing good baseball. Uncle Wilbert Robinson's flock, after all, may be the team the Cardinals will have to beat out to get into another World series with the Yankees.

For a horse even to complete the course on the day of the running of the Grand National is a great performance. Jack Horner did so two years in succession. The year before he won, while still English-owned, Jack Horner completed the four miles 255 yards, ridden by Morton Blair, an American amateur jockey. The next year, the horse won from a strong field of 30 starters, at a price of 25 to 1, which helped A. C. Schwartz pay for him.
Apparently a horse with such stamina as Jack Horner displayed at Aintree and in winning a dozen other good races during his career as a chaser, is of the type which scorns ease in old age.

CHICAGO "PRO" IS AHEAD OF FIELD IN GOLF TOURNAY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 26.—Playing hole-in-one golf to set a new course record, Al Espinosa, Chicago professional, led the field in the mid-America open golf tournament today as the players teed off on their third round.
Espinosa emerged from yesterday's round with a card of 68, four under par on the Lakewood course. He required only one stroke on the 145-yard No. 5 hole. His total score was 142.
Leo Diegel of White Plains, N. Y., trailed second with 148. Archie Compton, British star, again bested Walter Hagen, with whom he was paired, and had 149 for third place. Hagen, playing badly out of form, was considered out of the running with a total of 155.
Johnny Farrell, new national open champion, could do no better than a 153, while Gene Sarazen was ten strokes over that figure.
Ole B. Clark, the unknown Springfield, Mo., youth, who topped the field on the first day with a 71, faltered and ran his score up to 151 in yesterday's round.

The quiet peace of the pasture holds no appeal for old Jack Horner.

Where many a horse would be content to browse lazily through declining years on clover mixed with occasional sugar lumps brought by admiring visitors, the grand old 'chaser, which carried the colors of his American owner to victory in the Grand National at Aintree two years ago, still feels the urge to take the track.

After Jack Horner broke down while training for the famous steeplechase this spring, A. C. Schwartz had him shipped back to the United States and turned out to roam as he pleased. The horse's racing days were over, but his owner had no intention of disposing of the Grand National winner until old age overcame him.

Winning the Grand National steeplechase is an achievement, and Jack Horner had earned the best that the land could provide, Schwartz declared. He tried for a double with the gallant jumper in 1927 and again this year, but each time Jack Horner went wrong before the race.

Didn't Like Paddock
The peaceful, roomy paddock assigned to him didn't suit Jack Horner a bit. He fretted until those about him at Westbury wondered what was wrong. Gradually, Jack Horner let them know that he wanted to be back with stable companions, to take the morning gallops and feel a jock's knees and pick up speed as the furlong posts flashed past.

Many a horse would have been content with the equine luxury provided by an indulgent owner, but not this old champion. He craved work. So they have sent Jack Horner to Belmont Park where he leads one of Max Hirsch's strings in daily gallops. Head high, snorting and tossing his mane in the morning breeze,

Jack Horner is a happy horse once more. Some human beings are that way, unable to take their ease when they earned it, preferring to die in harness. Jack Horner is only 11 years old, and with care and attention may continue to be one of Schwartz's show horses for some time to come.

The Grand National Steeplechase, which Schwartz's horse won in 1926, is by all odds the most gruelling test of all horse racing. Each year there is agitation in favor of lessening the height and width of the jumps which the horses must clear. Each year, the greatest of racing thrills is provided by the perils and achievements at Aintree, a picturesque course just outside Liverpool, England.

Scorns Ease
This year, only one horse out of 42 starters finished the course without falling. An American owned horse, Billy Barton of Baltimore, was ahead at the last jump, slipped and fell and was beaten by Tipperary, a 10-to-1 shot. Billy Barton's jockey remounted and brought the colors of Howard Bruce home in second place.

For a horse even to complete the course on the day of the running of the Grand National is a great performance. Jack Horner did so two years in succession. The year before he won, while still English-owned, Jack Horner completed the four miles 285 yards, ridden by Morton Blair, an American amateur jockey. The next year, the horse won from a strong field of 30 starters, at a price of 25 to 1, which helped A. C. Schwartz pay for him.

Apparently a horse with such stamina as Jack Horner displayed at Aintree and in winning a dozen other good races during his career as a 'chaser, is of the type which scorns ease in old age.

CHICAGO "PRO" IS AHEAD OF FIELD IN GOLF TOURNEY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 26.—Playing hole-in-one golf to set a new course record, Al Espinosa, Chicago professional, led the field in the mid-America open golf tournament today as the players teed off on their third round.

Espinosa emerged from yesterday's round with a card of 68, four under par on the Lakewood course. He required only one stroke on the 145-yard No. 5 hole. His total score was 142.

Leo Diegel of White Plains, N. Y., ranked second with 148. Archie Compston, British star, again bested Walter Hagen, with whom he was paired, and had 149 for third place. Hagen, playing badly out of form, was considered out of the running with a total of 155.

Johnny Farrell, new national open champion, could do no better than a 153, while Gene Sarazen was ten strokes over that figure.

Ole B. Clark, the unknown Springfield, Mo., youth, who topped the field on the first day with a 71, faltered and ran his score up to 151 in yesterday's round.

He'll Be Floor Manager for Al

The popular mayor of New York City, James J. Walker, above, at his desk in City Hall, has been selected as floor manager for Governor Alfred E. Smith at the Democratic convention. Jimmy's getting things in shape so he can leave for Texas.

The Logan Livestock club met at the home of their leader, R. D. Head, Friday at 7:30 p. m.

The president, Wells Wilson, called for the minutes and roll call and all were present but the two poultry club members, Francis Blitzer and Kenneth Meadows.

After the roll call Mr. Head had President Wilson ask all pig club members to tell about their pigs, the way they tend them so they turn out to be fine ones by the time of the show. Mr. Lewis was present and gave an interesting talk on how to care for pigs, and gave an assignment to each member for the next meeting.

Gerald Imier will tell how to make a hurdle, Jos and Stanley Davis how to get ready for the show, Lawrence Wolford how to tend to pigs; Wayne Wilson, how to select a breeding hog, and Paul Wilson how to select a fat hog for the club.

The next meeting will be held at the home of R. D. Head, July 17, at 7:30 p. m.

FARM BUREAU IS GAINING IN ITS MEMBERSHIP NOW

More Than 2,500 Members Since First of Year, Pickaway-Co. Man Says.

Outstanding success of every branch of farm bureau activity during the past few months is opening up opportunities to farmers through organization that have never been present before, in the opinion of R. E. May, secretary of the Pickaway County Farm Bureau. The recent dedication of the new Farm Bureau building in Columbus and the events surrounding it give basis for the statement.

"More than 2,500 new members have been added to the organization since the beginning of this year," says Mr. May. "Last week the state organization announced a patronage dividend of $66,000, the largest single dividend ever paid on one spring's volume of co-operatively purchased fertilizer. The dedication week contest of the insurance company brought in more than 2,000 automobile insurance policies, a record never equalled by a company which deals with farmers only and nearly all of which came from those of one state."

"Livestock cooperatives have shown a growth of more than 20 per cent this year. Activities in legislative matters, in local government, in cooperative financing of business units, in securing rural electrification, in organizing for home and community benefits can be added to the fact that the farm bureau was able to construct its own headquarters largely from reserves of the organization shows some of the possibilities open."

Future growth of the organization and the advantages they can secure through it rests entirely on the ability of farmers to work together, in the opinion of Mr. May. Our leaders are pointing the way to many other lines of activity through which farmers can secure a more stable and prosperous agriculture, he says.

HARRY LUTGENS, PUBLISHER OF THE SAN RAFAEL (CALIF.) INDEPENDENT, SAYS:

"Merchants and newspapers can talk trade at home until they are blue in the face, because talk is cheap. But talk does not get merchandising results; nothing that's cheap ever does get results. The consumer is hard boiled. He wants prices and quality.

"Metropolitan centers draw business away from suburban and rural sections by spending money for advertising, not through talking trade at home. They use the metropolitan newspapers for their show-windows in the rural sections.

"THE HOME TOWN MERCHANT CARRIES THE SAME NATIONALLY ADVERTISED GOODS AS THE METROPOLITAN MERCHANT DOES. HE CAN SELL AT THE SAME PRICE. BUT INSTEAD OF JUST TALKING HOME TRADE AND EXPECTING HIS LOCAL NEWSPAPER TO PERFORM A MIRACLE BY WRITING HOME TRADE EDITORIALS, HE SHOULD USE THE SAME MEDIUM TO KEEP TRADE AT HOME THAT THE METROPOLITAN MERCHANT USES TO TAKE IT AWAY FROM HIM—ADVERTISE IN THE NEWSPAPERS!"

THE IMPOSSIBLE THINGS

The impossible things are the things that need to be done. So says the Rev. Henry H. Tweedy of Yale university in an address to the graduating class of Lake Erie College for Women.

The rise of civilization, the speakers points out, is the story of man's increasing accomplishment of impossible. For most impossibilities are only imaginary; they seem impossible, and we accept them as such, until some very energetic or skeptical man comes along and does them.

There are a great many obvious illustrations. When Morse was experimenting with the telegraph there doubtless were many friends to tell him the thing was impossible. While the Wright brothers were making their first flight, a distinguished Washington scientist was proving mathematically, that flight in a heavier-than-air machine was impossible. When Ford established a minimum wage of $5 a day there were plenty of people who knew it was impossible to run a business that way.

But the challenge to accomplish the impossible is not something that has to do solely with the material world. It is equally pressing in the realm of the spirit; more pressing there, in fact, than anywhere else.

Of all the problems now confronting the world, nothing is much greater than the problem of warfare. In the old days, when wars were conducted by relatively small armies, a war was not a major matter necessarily. Now, however, war affects everyone. The last war very nearly bankrupted European civilization. It left the victors little better off than the vanquished.

Airplanes, submarines, poison gas, modern explosives have widened war's scope tremendously. If another war comes, involving as many nations as the last, it is quite possible that the entire world would be plunged back into the dark ages.

It is up to the world to find some way of avoiding wars. But every time that is suggested, someone is sure to say: "Oh, you can't even do that. You can't change human nature."

Yet that is precisely what must be done. It is one of the impossibilities that this generation must accomplish. Human nature, of course, can be changed; it has been changed vastly in the last few centuries. Compare the ways and customs of medieval Europe with our own, if you don't believe it; it was "human nature" to do a great many things in those days, which no sane man would think of doing now.

We must do it. The world's future will be pretty dark if we fail.

GERMAN PLANE FARE

Milton Bronner, European correspondent of this paper writes of the new non-stop Berlin to Paris air line, operated by the famous German Luft Hansa company.

Commodious new planes carry passengers from Berlin to Paris in less than six hours—well under half the regular train time. The fare, likewise, is less than railroad fare between the two points.

An American, naturally, is moved to ask why our air lines can't do as well. They do in point of speed, of course; but fares remain considerably higher than railroad fares in this country, and they probably will for some time.

The answer, of course, is that the Luft Hansa, like all European air lines, gets a government subsidy. It can charge low fares because the government guarantees it a profit. In this country an air line must pay its own way. That explains the difference in fares. Our lines are more expensive to us; yet, after all, they are being established on a healthier basis.

CLAIMS IMMUNITY

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Senatorial immunity was claimed by Senator Couzens of Michigan in filing a motion before the District of Columbia supreme court to quash a $50,000 libel suit instituted by Howe P. Cochran, tax consultant, who charged Couzens with embezzling money from the Senate.

I THINK SO!

Today while in conversation with a friend He made the remark: "I think I've Lost out". And with a sigh Gave himself up with That dire Realization. And it started me to Thinking and Wondering If men who lose any Sort of a struggle Do not always Couch their defeat Before it happens In some words like: "I think I've Lost out!" And so it goes in All the world. If we are ready and Apparently willing To be defeated, Failure comes Easy. For we are in a Receptive mood—Defeat is so easy Anyway. Tugging at our arms, Tearing down our Soul and disposition, Ready to jump on Us At the least Provocation and how Nice it must be For this great enemy To hear us say: "I think I've Lost out!"—

And what we mean to say Is, We can say To Ourselves just as Easily: "I know I can win out", If only we will take That attitude on Life instead Of discounting our Ability for isn't it True that half the Battles are won Because first of all We THOUGHT we could Win them.

No news is good news and it has been so long since the Prince of Wales has fallen off his horse and gotten a column writeup about it that we feel like sending his press agent a cablegram of congratulations.

A judge is a fellow who never seems half as mean when you meet him on the street as when you face him in the court room.

AIN'T THERE NO HAPPY MEDIUM?

About the cold I surely kicked a lot, And now complain Because it is so hot. —Sam Hill, Cincy Enquirer.

When rain comes down I shout, "Well, it's a pain!" But when it's dry I kinda want It back again.

Fame makes its partners famous, to a greater or less degree, and we guess anyone could have bought Brule, Wis., for about any amount of money and they would have been glad to have gotten the place off their hands until Mr. Coolidge started fishing there.

We suppose, supposes Bob Ryder, the next time this solicitous old country will be kept on tenterhooks of anxiety for 30 or 40 hours, if not longer, will be when some good-looking young female hops off on the theory that she has to be the first mother to fly across the Atlantic.

It would be better for the country, Bob, if she would be the first mother who admits she likes to stay at home with her children.

Lessee, where is the vice-president fishing at?

Few men can be a real success until they've first been cheerful failures.

It's getting so from the way they talk we can't tell whether they're just out of high school or Yale until they tell us.

"TENDERLOIN," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picture adaptation of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
A satchel containing $200,000 has been stolen from the Mercer National Bank. The police suspect the Professor, leader of a gang of crooks, of being involved. His headquarters, an antique shop, is constantly watched. The Professor believes that lovely Rose Shannon, a cabaret dancer, knows where the money is hidden. He assigns Chuck White, one of his gangsters, to invite her to the country to visit Chuck's supposed "aunt." He hopes Rose will give herself away during her stay. Chuck finds himself more and more attracted to the lovely girl. In the meantime the police are following another clue.

CHAPTER XII—Continued
"Oh, I dunno," Simpson remarked gloomily, reflecting on the visit they had paid three days before to Daniels' Twenty-seventh Street apartment. They had made a thorough search of the Cashier's room, only to find everything in neat order—the typical, small, fairly well-furnished apartment of any man living on a cashier's salary. Close questioning of elevator boys and the janitor only gave them the information that Daniels was a man of regular habits; that he never entertained any women—once in a while a man or two; and that he never drank—that is, he had never had a bit of trouble with him. Not at all like a lot of the men nowadays. She followed her visitors to the door and showed them out. The two detectives walked slowly down the street, Cowles eager and interested, Simpson lethargic and thoughtful.

A lean woman, her head done up in a towel, opened the door.

Simpson finally reminded Cowles, "We gotta do do something, anyhow."

"We sure have," Cowles remarked bitterly. "All right, then, come on. After that we'd better dig around the Professor's joint again, an' see if we can pick up anything new."

They headed for the Seventh Avenue subway in silence. In silence they boarded an uptown train and rode until they reached Ninth-sixth Street. They got off and walked back one block and then turned west, searching for the number of Hawkins' house, finally stopping before an old, red-brick, brown-stone front dwelling.

Going up the short flight of steps that led to the heavy, old-fashioned double doors, Cowles rang the bell. There was a short wait, and then a lean woman, scrawny of neck and withered of face, her head done up in a towel, opened the door a little way and looked her visitors up and down.

"No, I don't want anything today at all," she exclaimed unceremoniously, and started to close the door. "Just a minute, lady," Cowles thrust his foot into the crack, and stepped inside, followed by Simpson. "We're not selling anything. Sorry to trouble you but—we're back here, revealing his badge. 'Oh, I beg your pardon,' the woman apologized. 'Come right in.' She led the way to a parlor, where a plush furniture, relieved by a dashing Chinese vase holding a bunch of gilded cut o' nine tails, held heavy sway over the room, and motion the detectives to be seated.

"You have a Mr. Hawkins living here, haven't you—Elmer Hawkins?" Cowles began. "Why, no, not right now, that is," the woman replied. "In fact, he hasn't been here since he had that accident—when he was taken to the hospital. That was right after that bank where he worked was robbed."

Cowles shot a quick glance at Simpson, but the other's face was a study in impassivity. "See," Cowles frowned. "Had he spoken to you before that accident?" "Oh, yes. He gave me a week's notice. I always ask that of my people. But then, when he had that accident it delayed him a few days. But Mr. Hawkins wouldn't have left without giving me notice."

He was pacing up and down the room, a sheet of letter paper fluttering from his long blunt fingers. Over in a corner Sparrow, the Mug and Lot, sat engaged in a game of Twenty-One. Their voices were lowered as they called out the numbers, and from time to time they glanced anxiously towards their leader, ignorant of the cause of his anger, but fearful lest his wrath be vented on them.

"Damn that yellow-belly!" He turned suddenly, his voice high-pitched, strained, excited. "I'll break every bone in his body if I ever lay my hands on him. Listen to this!" Hemnway spread out the letter he had been holding. "It's from Molly. She says she's damned sick of the whole game. 'All Chuck does is muck around the jame and look like he's cracked,' he read. 'He don't even mention the jack. Something ought to be done, you oughter come down here yourself, I talked to him but it don't do no good.'"

He glared at the three men as though they, as well as Chuck, had a hand in the affair. "I think," he began slowly, his eyes narrowing into small slits, "that we'll take a little trip to the country." He looked at his watch. "There's no another train down there until evening. Five-forty, I think. You'll all be here, ready to leave at five sharp. Have the dicks been around here today?"

"I ain't seed 'em," Sparrow piped up, anxious to put himself in the good graces of the leader. "By been shadowin' 'em bank cloiks, Maurey says."

"They've been tailing the bank clerk," the Professor interrupted. "What for? I thought they'd given that up a long time ago." He frowned. "What'd Maurey tell you? Why didn't you let this out before?"

"Just a minute!" Sparrow began. "Ain't I tellin' ya? 'Ey ain't got nut'in on 'em birds. But 'er Chief up to the Front Office's sore as hell, an' 'ey gotta do somethin' to shut him up, ain't dey? So 'ey starts tailin' one bunch of nuts they are,' the Professor laughed sarcastically. "Well, maybe that'll keep them away from here for a while. We've got to get out of here without their seeing us. And I don't want any slip-ups. Things are bad enough as they are." He clumped back into his inner office to sit down and ponder over the situation.

The three gangsters resumed their game of Twenty-One with more fervor, now that the storm had blown over so easily and lightly. Lefty and the Mug were intent on the cards, but Sparrow was twisting nervously in his chair, paying scant attention to his pasteboard. Finally he glanced at his watch. One thirty.

Are Americans Safe In China?

By Chas. A. Sauer

"That's a good place to be away from now," said a friend of mine as he looked at a map of Korea. "You're wrong," I replied. "Korea is as safe and quiet as Ohio."

The fact is that I was shocked when I returned to America a year ago to find almost every paper carrying news of a child kidnapped, a man murdered, a bank robbed. For six years I had had little of that, for such things are uncommon in Korea. There are two or three reasons for this.

First of all, it is difficult to own a gun in Korea. One must first secure a police permit. Such permits are limited to a very few in each county for hunting purposes. The police know the name of every man in the locality who owns a gun, and care is taken to see that permits are not issued to men of doubtful character.

In the second place, Korea does not have to contend with the automobile as an accessory to crime. There are indeed many machines used for taxicab and autobus service but very few are privately owned. Here again the permit system is a strict one and no one may drive a machine who does not have an operator's license. Since these permits are handled by the local police department and not by some far off state highway department, it is possible to carefully examine each applicant as to character as well as to his ability to operate a car. The result is that the chances of a gun or an automobile getting into the hands of a group of criminals are comparatively slight.

It is not my purpose to advocate such regulations in America. I am suggesting that we Americans seem to be able to invent new machines more rapidly than we educate ourselves morally to use them properly, while Japan seems able to profit by our mistakes.

But even war-torn China is a comparatively safe place for the American. The missionary and the business man who is known for his uprightness and square dealing have nothing to fear. True it is that occasionally an American is killed. Every country has its irresponsibilities. But where such a thing occurs the mass of the people openly oppose and denounce such action. Neither the Chinese nor any other people like to have foreigners molested because they know it creates a bad impression in other countries.

True it is that about a year ago we had almost the entire missionary body fleeing from the interior of China. But when it was possible to get the facts it was apparent at once that in only two or three cities had there been any danger at all, and that 90 per cent of these missionaries left peaceful communities where they had been in no danger whatsoever. Why?

In all cases they had been ordered to the port cities by the American consuls. They supposed that these consuls had information which showed the situation to be more desperate than they themselves could know. To remain after being ordered out meant the possibility of marines and gunboats being sent for their protection. Such an advance of soldiers might excite some hot-headed Chinese to attack a foreigner. Then more troops would be rushed in. The result of this situation was that even Christian Chinese in peaceful communities were counselling their missionary friends to withdraw for a few weeks.

This situation is well illustrated in the recent trouble with Japan. A month ago Japanese citizens were being atrociously mutilated and murdered in China. A war between China and Japan was freely predicted. But at the same time the Japanese press, almost without a single exception, was denouncing the action of government troops in China and declaring that the Japanese troops had brought this trouble upon the civilian population. In other words had there been no Japanese troops in that area to incite hatred of the Japanese, no Japanese would have been murdered! Note that no other nationalities were involved in that area.

against foreigners occur as it gives them further argument for the existence of large numbers of marines in China and helps them to justify the present expenditure by the United States government of $7,000,000 to place six new gunboats in Chinese rivers. Why six new gunboats in Chinese waters? Certainly not to protect the missionaries, for they with one accord denounce the gunboat policy and state that "the use of armed forces to protect missionaries and mission property gravely hinders the acceptance of the Christian message! Some of them are seriously considering the giving up of their citizenship rights in America in order that such complications may not arise again!"

The more one reads concerning the new China of the last two or three years the more he is convinced that the farther missionaries gets away from the troops of his own nationality the safer he is! And the same is true of any American whose business dealing with the Chinese is based upon just and Christian principles.

ILLS OF CHILDHOOD BETTER UNDERSTOOD

Croup and Similar Maladies Have Been Identified So That Treatment Is Directed With Greater Accuracy.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

YEARS ago a good many physical ailments were not understood. It was not unusual to group together several ailments which are now recognized as separate and distinct diseases. Pneumonia, for instance, is now divided into several different "types."

Bacteriology, the science dealing with germs, has revealed the true nature of a good many diseases. It has proven that some of those which were formerly counted as separate diseases, are really identical.

As an example, let us consider the old-fashioned "membranous croup," as it was called. This is now recognized to be diphtheria.

There is another disease which used to be called "false croup." It wasn't croup at all. Now it is referred to as "spasmodic laryngitis."

The larynx is the part of the throat between the base of the tongue and the windpipe. It is lined with mucous membrane and, like such membrane elsewhere, this is a tissue which is liable to become inflamed.

Children between the ages of two and five are most likely to be attacked by croup. It is preceded for a couple of days or less by running of the nose, slight cough and, possibly, a little fever. It may be thought the child has a mild cold.

In other cases there may be no warning signs. The attack may come on with great suddenness. In the early part of the night, the usually after the first sleep, the child is aroused from a sleep which may have been natural and undisturbed. He awakens with a loud and barking cough. It is a peculiar, metallic cough.

There is very marked difficulty in breathing. Every breath seems harsh and whistling. The swelling of the membrane leaves little space for the entrance and exit of air. The face becomes flushed. The skin is hot and the pulse is rapid. The child gives every evidence of fear, as well as suffering. He cries, is very restless and wants to be carried. In an hour or so the symptoms improve and the breathing is less difficult.

The attack may be repeated the next night and perhaps for two or three nights. In the treatment there are two things to be accomplished. The first and immediate thing is to overcome the spasmodic closure of the throat. Then the inflammation may be treated.

If hot water can be had, fill a tub with it, at a temperature of about 100 degrees. Keep the little patient in this for a quarter of an hour. Be very careful not to scald the child.

Sometimes a hot foot-bath, with a teaspoonful of mustard in the water, will relieve the symptoms. This may be enough to give complete relief. The common household treatment is to give an emetic. For this purpose syrup of ipecac alone or with a drop of squills is a favorite remedy. But your doctor should advise you about this.

G. S. Q.—What can be done for rough, pimply skin on the legs? The rest of the body is very smooth.

A.—May be due to an eczematous condition. For further particulars, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

S. H. S. Q.—Will the chewing of tobacco harm a seventeen-year-old boy? Will pipe smoking, if not inhaled, prove harmful under the same circumstances?

A.—Bad for both digestion and teeth. A boy of seventeen is too young to indulge in pipe or other smoking.

THE IMPOSSIBLE THINGS

The impossible things are the things that need to be done. So says the Rev. Henry H. Tweedy of Yale, university in an address to the graduating class of Lake Erie College for Women.

The rise of civilization, the speakers points out, is the story of man's increasing accomplishment of impossible. For most impossibilities are only imaginary; they seem impossible, and we accept them as such, until some very energetic or skeptical man comes along and does them.

There are a great many obvious illustrations. When Morse was experimenting with the telegraph there doubtless were many friends to tell him the thing was impossible. While the Wright brothers were making their first flight, a distinguished Washington scientist was proving mathematically, that flight in a heavier-than-air machine was impossible. When Ford established a minimum wage of $5 a day there were plenty of people who knew it was impossible to run a business that way.

But the challenge to accomplish the impossible is not something that has to do solely with the material world. It is equally pressing in the realm of the spirit; more pressing there, in fact, than anywhere else.

Of all the problems now confronting the world, nothing is much greater than the problem of warfare. In the old days, when wars were conducted by relatively small armies, a war was not a major matter necessarily. Now, however, war affects everyone. The last war very nearly bankrupted European civilization. It left the victors little better off than the vanquished.

Airplanes, submarines, poison gas, modern explosives have widened war's scope tremendously. If another war comes, involving as many nations as the last, it is quite possible that the entire world would be plunged back into the dark ages.

It is up to the world to find some way of avoiding wars. But every time that is suggested, someone is sure to say: "Oh, you can't even do that. You can't change human nature."

Yet that is precisely what must be done. It is one of the impossibilities that this generation must accomplish. Human nature, of course, can be changed; it has been changed vastly in the last few centuries. Compare the ways and customs of medieval Europe with our own, if you don't believe it. It was "human nature" to do a great many things in those days, which no sane man would think of doing now.

We must do it. The world's future will be pretty dark if we fail.

GERMAN PLANE FARE

Milton Bronner, European correspondent of this paper writes of the new non-stop Berlin to Paris air line, operated by the famous German Luft Hansa company.

Commodious new planes carry passengers from Berlin to Paris in less than six hours—well under half the regular train time. The fare, likewise, is less than railroad fare between the two points.

An American, naturally, is moved to ask why our air lines can't do as well. They do in point of speed, of course; but fares remain considerably higher than railroad fares in this country, and they probably will for some time.

The answer, of course, is that the Luft Hansa, like all European air lines, gets a government subsidy. It can charge low fares because the government guarantees it a profit. In this country an air line must pay its own way. That explains the difference in fares. Our lines are more expensive to us; yet, after all, they are being established on a healthier basis.

CLAIMS IMMUNITY

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Senatorial immunity was claimed by Senator Coughens of Michigan in filing a motion before the District of Columbia supreme court to quash a $50,000 libel suit instituted by Howe P. Cochran, tax consultant, who charged Coughens with sedition in a speech to the senate.

SYNOPSIS

A satchel containing $200,000 has been stolen from the Mercer National Bank. The police suspect the Professor, leader of a gang of crooks, of being involved. His headquarters, on antique shop, is constantly watched. The Professor believes that lovely Rose Shannon, a cabaret dancer, knows where the money is hidden. He assigns Chuck White, one of his gangsters, to invite her to the country to visit Chuck's supposed "aunt." He hopes Rose will give herself away during her stay. Chuck finds himself more and more attracted to the lovely girl. In the meantime the police are following another clue.

He was one of my best roomers. He's been with me for—see, it's been three years. A very fine young man, only he was getting married. Of course, I offered to arrange something for them here, but they'd decided, he and the girl, to take a little house out in Sunny-side.

"Did he leave his address?" Simpson drawled.

"Well, no, he didn't," the woman admitted. "But he said he'd notify the postman himself, in case any letters came for him, and then he'd stop by here later on to see if there had been any messages for him."

"Have you seen him since he left here?" Cowles rose to his feet, impatient to be off on what he believed might be a claw which would lead to some further development.

"No, I haven't seen him. But I suppose he's been pretty busy getting married and settled and all."

"Well, come on, Simpson," Cowles prodded his companion into activity. "Thanks, Mrs.—Mrs.—" He waited for the woman to supply her own name.

"Miss Lampton," she corrected the detective. "That's all right. I hope that there's nothing wrong, though. Mr. Hawkins is such a nice young man. Very sober and industrious, I must say. I never had a bit of trouble with him. Not at all like a lot of the men now-a-days."

She followed her visitors to the door and showed them out.

The two detectives walked slowly down the street, Cowles eager and interested, Simpson lethargic and thoughtful.

"Well, I know where we're going. We're going down and get that fellow's address from the bank, and then we're going out to have a look at him," Cowles began.

"How about the professor's?"

"They can get along without us for one day," Cowles grinned. "Probably he just as glad we didn't drop around."

He was pacing up and down the room, a sheet of letter paper fluttering from his long, blunt fingers. Over in a corner Sparrow, the Mug and Letty sat engaged in a game of Twenty-One. Their voices were lowered as they called out the numbers, and from time to time they glanced anxiously towards their leader, ignorant of the cause of his anger, but fearful lest his wrath be vented on them.

"Damn that yellow-belly!" He turned suddenly, his voice high-pitched, strained, excited. "I'll break every bone in his body if I ever lay my hands on him. Listen to this! Hemmaway spread out the letter he had been holding.

And I don't want any slip-ups. Things are bad enough as they are." He clumped back into his inner office to sit down and ponder over the situation.

The three gangsters resumed their game of Twenty-one with more fervor, now that the storm had blown over so easily and lightly.

But the Chief and the Mug were intent on the card game, but Sparrow was twisting nervously in his chair, paying scant attention to his partners. Finally he glanced at his watch. One thirty.

(To be concluded.)

A lean woman, her head done up in a towel, opened the door.

Simpson finally reminded Cowles. "We gotta to do somethin', anyhow."

"We cure have," Cowles remarked bitterly. "All right, then, come on. After that we'd better dig around the Professor's joint again, an' see if we can pick up anything new."

They headed for the Seventh Avenue subway in silence. In silence they boarded an uptown train and rode until they reached Ninth Street. They got off and walked back one block and then turned west, searching for the number of Hawkins' house, finally stopping before an old, red-brick, brownstone front dwelling.

Going up the short flight of steps that led to the heavy, old-fashioned double doors, Cowles rang the bell. There was a short wait, and then a lean woman, scrawny of neck and withered of face, her head done up in a towel, opened the door a little way and looked her visitors up and down.

"No, I don't want anything today at all," she exclaimed unceremoniously, and started to close the door.

"Just a minute, lady," Cowles thrust his foot into the crack, and stepped inside, followed by Simpson. "We're not selling anything. Sorry to trouble you but—we're from headquarters." He pulled back his coat, revealing his badge.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," the woman apologized, her attitude changing decidedly. "Come right in."

She led the way to a parlor, where red-plush furniture, relieved by a jasper Chinese vase holding a bunch of gladiolus cut of nine tails, bled heavily away over the room, and motioned the detectives to be seated.

"You have a Mr. Hawkins living here, haven't you—Elmer Hawkins?" Cowles began.

"Why, no, not right now, that is," the woman replied. "In fact, he hasn't been here since he had that accident—when he was taken to the hospital. That was right after that bank where he worked was robbed."

Cowles shot a quick glance at Simpson, but the other's face was a study in impassivity.

"A son of a gun," Cowles frowned. "And he spoke to you before that about leaving?"

"Why yes. He said me a word or two. I always ask that of my people. But then, when he had that accident he layed him a few days. But Mr. Hawkins wouldn't aise left without giving me notice."

"What a bunch of nuts they are," the Professor laughed sarcastically. "Well, maybe that'll keep them away from here for a while. We've got to get out of here without their seeing us. And I don't want any slip-ups. Things are bad enough as they are." He clumped back into his inner office to sit down and ponder over the situation.

The three gangsters resumed their game of Twenty-one with more fervor, now that the storm had blown over so easily and lightly.

But the Chief and the Mug were intent on the card game, but Sparrow was twisting nervously in his chair, paying scant attention to his partners. Finally he glanced at his watch. One thirty.

(To be concluded.)

Coming in a note, began looking into the windows, emerging at this point, the doors open, a beautiful woman comes out to the street followed by several dandling old men, and a crowd of people watching a condemné remove a disturber from a cafe.

That is the Paris revealed on the screen in Florence, Victor's latest Paramount starring vehicle, "The Magnificent Phihar," now being shown at the Metropolitan theatre.

Are Americans Safe In China?

By Chas. A. Sauer

"That's a good place to be away from now," said a friend of mine as he looked at a map of Korea. "You're wrong," I replied. "Korea is as safe and quiet as Ohio."

The fact is that I was shocked when I returned to America a year ago to find almost every paper carrying news of a child kidnapped, a man murdered, a bank robbed. For six years I had had little of that, for such things are uncommon in Korea. There are two or three reasons for this.

First of all, it is difficult to own a gun in Korea. One must first secure a police permit. Such permits are limited to a very few in each county for hunting purposes.

The police know the name of every man in the locality who owns a gun, and care is taken to see that permits are not issued to men of doubtful character.

In the second place, Korea does not have to contend with the automobile as an accessory to crime. There are indeed many machines used for taxicab and autobus service but very few are privately owned. Here again the permit system is a strict one and no one may drive a machine who does not have an operator's license. Since these permits are handled by the local police department and not by some far off state highway department, it is possible to carefully examine each applicant as to character as well as to his ability to operate a car. The result is that the chances of a gun or an automobile getting into the hands of a group of criminals are comparatively slight.

It is not my purpose to advocate such regulations in America. I am suggesting that we Americans seem to be able to invent new machines more rapidly than we educate ourselves morally to use them properly, while Japan seems able to profit by our mistakes.

But even war-torn China is a comparatively safe place for the American. The missionary and the business man who is known for his uprightness and square dealing have nothing to fear. True it is that occasionally an American is killed. Every country has its irresponsibilities. But where such a thing occurs the mass of the people openly oppose and denounce such action. Neither the Chinese nor any other people like to have foreigners molested because they know it creates a bad impression in other countries.

True it is that about a year ago we had almost the entire missionary body fleeing from the interior of China. But when it was possible to get the facts it was apparent at once that in only two or three cities had there been any danger at all, and that 90 per cent of these missionaries left peacefully in other countries.

There is no danger whatsoever. Why?

In all cases they had been ordered to the port cities by the American consuls. They supposed that these consuls had information which showed the situation to be more desperate than they themselves could know. To remain after being ordered out meant the possibility of marines and gunboats being sent for their protection. Such an advance of soldiers might excite some hot-headed Chinese to attack a foreigner. Then more troops would be rushed in. The result of this situation was that even Christian Chinese in peaceful communities were counselling their missionary friends to withdraw for a few weeks.

This situation is well illustrated in the recent trouble with Japan. A month ago Japanese citizens were being atrociously mutilated and murdered in China. A war between China and Japan was freely predicted. But at the same time the Japanese press, almost without a single exception, was denouncing the action of government troops in China and declaring that the Japanese troops had brought this trouble upon the civilian population. In other words had there been no Japanese troops in that area to incite hatred of the Japanese, no Japanese would have been murdered! Note that no other nationalities were involved in that area.

Certain business and commercial interests are glad when outbreaks against foreigners occur as it gives them further argument for the existence of large numbers of marines in China and helps them to justify the present expenditure by the United States government of $7,000,000 to place six new gunboats in Chinese rivers. Why six new gunboats in Chinese waters? Certainly not to protect the missionaries, for they with one accord denounce the gunboat policy and state that "the use of armed forces to protect missionaries and mission property gravely hinders the acceptance of the Christian message." Some of them are seriously considering the giving up of their citizenship rights in America, in order that such complications may not arise again!

The more one reads concerning the new China of the last two or three years the more he is convinced that the farther missionaries gets away from the troops of his own nationality the safer he is! And the same is true of any American whose business dealing with the Chinese is based upon just and Christian principles.

FARM BUREAU IS GAINING IN ITS MEMBERSHIP NOW

More Than 2,500 Members Since First of Year, Pickaway-Co. Man Says.

Outstanding success of every branch of farm bureau activity during the past few months is opening up opportunities to farmers through organization that have never been present before, in the opinion of R. E. May, secretary of the Pickaway County Farm Bureau. The recent dedication of the new Farm Bureau building in Columbus and the events surrounding it give basis for the statement.

"More than 2,500 new members have been added to the organization since the beginning of this year," says Mr. May. "Last week the state organization announced a patronage dividend of $66,000, the largest single dividend ever paid on one spring's volume of co-operatively purchased fertilizer. The dedication week contest of the insurance company brought in more than 2,000 automobile insurance policies, a record never equalled by a company which deals with farmers only and nearly all of which came from those of one state."

"Livestock cooperatives have shown a growth of more than 20 per cent this year. Activities in legislative matters, in local government, in cooperative financing of business units, in securing rural electrification, in organizing for home and community benefits can be added to the fact that the farm bureau was able to construct its own headquarters largely from reserves of the organization shows some of the possibilities open."

Future growth of the organization and the advantages they can secure through it rests entirely on the ability of farmers to work together, in the opinion of Mr. May. Our leaders are pointing the way to many other lines of activity through which farmers can secure a more stable and prosperous agriculture, he says.

In a statement issued here last night, Thompson said he had decided to withdraw his candidacy in the interests of party harmony. Thompson entered the senatorial race shortly after Congressman Theodore Burton of Cleveland, announced he would be a candidate. Both announcements were made prior to the Republican National convention in Kansas City, at which differences as affecting the Ohio party, were ironed out.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

BY EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Oklahoma

HARRY LUTGENS, PUBLISHER OF THE SAN RAFAEL (CALIF.) INDEPENDENT, SAYS:

"Merchants and newspapers can talk trade at home until they are blue in the face, because talk is cheap. But talk does not get merchandising results; nothing that's cheap ever does get results. The consumer is hard boiled. He wants prices and quality.

"Metropolitan centers draw business away from suburban and rural sections by spending money for advertising, not through talking trade at home. They use the metropolitan newspapers for their show-windows in the rural sections.

"THE HOME TOWN MERCHANT CARRIES THE SAME NATIONALLY ADVERTISED GOODS AS THE METROPOLITAN MERCHANT DOES. HE CAN SELL AT THE SAME PRICE. BUT INSTEAD OF JUST TALKING HOME TRADE AND EXPECTING HIS LOCAL NEWSPAPER TO PERFORM A MIRACLE BY WRITING HOME TRADE EDITORIALS, HE SHOULD USE THE SAME MEDIUM TO KEEP TRADE AT HOME THAT THE METROPOLITAN MERCHANT USES TO TAKE IT AWAY FROM HIM—ADVERTISE IN THE NEWSPAPERS!"

W. C. T. U. INSTITUTE HELD AT HILL HOME
The Darbyville W. C. T. U. Institute held at the lovely home of Mrs. Harry Hill was a day of much interest in the cause of Prohibition. County officers were guests, each of whom was helpful and kind.

After the devotionals by Mrs. Gusman, the program continued with "The Plan of Work." Under this "Evangelism" came first. "Membership" was an important factor, and every member was asked to bring a new member. Dues was another important department, and publicity was one of the most necessary diversions. And citizenship—the W. C. T. U. is all partisan.

While on this subject it was advised to find out how each local or county now stood on Prohibition's Law Enforcement, meaning each man or woman whose name is to be voted on, at the primaries.

Education and Y. P. E., and L. T. L. each engaged the attention of the Institute. Mrs. Mary Dunlap voiced the noon hour prayer. After a covered dish dinner, the meeting combined with a temperance entertainment which dealt with what former United States presidents thought about alcohol. One very good paper was read and discussed. "Why Is It Necessary for the President of United States to be in Sympathy with the 18th Amendment?" His appointing power was the best reason.

Misses Christena and Blanche Heeter sang selections, as did Miss Louise Carpenter. Mrs. Jennie Dick read a poem and Uviana Carolyn Schwen gave a recitation. It was a day of real pleasure, while at the same time, a large amount of work was accomplished.

RUDY'S ENTERTAIN TO DINNER
Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Rudy entertained to an elegant dinner at their home Sunday. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mound-st., and is a graduate of the Circleville high school in the class of 1927. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lemley.

W. C. T. U. INSTITUTE HELD AT HILL HOME
The Darbyville W. C. T. U. Institute held at the lovely home of Mrs. Harry Hill was a day of much interest in the cause of Prohibition. County officers were guests, each of whom was helpful and kind.

After the devotionals by Mrs. Gusman, the program continued with "The Plan of Work." Under this "Evangelism" came first. "Membership" was an important factor, and every member was asked to bring a new member. Dues, was another important department, and publicity was one of the most necessary diversions. And citizenship—the W. C. T. U. is all partisan.

While on this subject it was advised to find out how each local or county now stood on Prohibition's Law Enforcement, meaning each man or woman whose name is to be voted on, at the primaries.

Education and Y. P. B., and L. T. L. each engaged the attention of the Institute. Mrs. Mary Dunlap voiced the noon hour prayer. After a covered dish dinner, the meeting combined with a temperance entertainment which dealt with what former United States presidents thought about alcohol. One very good paper was read and discussed—"Why Is It Necessary for the President of United States to be in Sympathy with the 18th Amendment?" His appointing power was the best reason.

Misses Christena and Blanche Heeter sang selections, as did Miss Louise Carpenter. Mrs. Jennie Dick read a poem and Uvana Carolyn Schwein gave a recitation. It was a day of real pleasure, while at the same time, a large amount of work was accomplished.
